The talk between the two disputants formed, in fact, the bulk of her testimony. The judge was puzzled to know how she knew so well what the man and woman were calling each other.

Frank Murphy appeared in court yesterday with a badly smashed head. He plead guilty to being drunk and disturbing the peace, and after paying his fine began to complain of a young man named Sweeney for hitting him with a club. It appears that Murphy while drunk came wawling about the house drunk, came prowling about the house occupied by the Sweeneys, and the boy went out with a club and knocked him senseless so that the police could carry him off easy.

The Mueller Music company remembers the BEE with a number of pieces of sheet music recently published by the well-known Ditson & Co., of Boston. The BEE is more of a stinger than it is a singer, but it "hums" some, and it has many friends who do sing and play. They have been trying the new pieces and pronounce them winners, and the BEE relies on their judgment. The music lovers long since learned that there is always something new and pretty to be had by calling on Mueller.

The Nonpareil devoted a half column yesterday to scoring the school board for not increasing the salary of N. E. Tyson, the janitor of the school building on the hill. It makes the wild statement that Tyson, being an expert engineer, and an excellent janitor, gets only $15 a month for his services, while other janitors are being paid $50 te $70 a month. The lengthy appeal for a raise of Tyson's salary might look all right if facts were stated, but, as the BEE is informed by those who surely ought to know, Tyson is already paid $50 a month, and is given house rent and fuel free. This makes it equal to $75 a month, which is more than he was getting when on the police force. He is doubtless a good janitor, but it seems that if he is dissatisfied with a salary equal to $75 a month, there are other good men who could be had to fill the place. the place. ### THE SUNDAY BEE THE FIRST CHURCH IN IOWA,

The Opening Services in St. Paul's New Episcopal Church To-Day. DESCRIPTION OF THE BUILDING.

Other Doings in the Bluffs-The Matince of Speed Yesterday-An Audacious Sneak Thief-Police Points Points of Piety.

St. Paul's New Church. The BEE renders are given this morning a description of the new and beautiful St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church, which will be opened to-day for the worship of God. The readers will be enabled o understand from the description the details, which they can study at their leisure, of a building as complete in every point and as richly furnished as any in the west. The church is of gothic style of architecture, the side walls being higher than is usual in Episcopal churches, allowing of larger windows in the nave, thus insuring plenty of light and a bright, cheerful auditorium. The walls are of Missouri sandstone in rough ashlar, from the yards of Drexel & Foll, of Omaha. The stone being easily cut, the architect has seized this opportunity to display the beauty of design in carving to an extent rarely seen even in the most costly churches in the land. The tower and west front of the building is a beautiful blending of the rough ashlar with exquisite carving, giving an appearance exquisite carving, giving an appearance of grace and strength, which must be seen to be appreciated. In the work of the exterior nothing could be added to make it more perfect. The great west gable, rising to a height of sixty feet, terminated by a stone cross, is flanked on the north by the massive tower and on the south by the perfect, which forms the by the octagon wing, which forms the rector's study. It is pierced by a rose window, thirteen feet in diameter, and ceneath this window is a porch running across the entire front in which are three main entrances, the doors being in solid oak of the best workmanzhip. The transept on the north adds a beautiful feature to the outside appearance of the structure, with its gothic porch and oak doors, like the great west front. This transept is intended to be used as a lenten lecture room and is to be divided from hoped, will ere long be heard in the new To the architect, Mr. S. E. Maxon, be longs unstinted praise for this beautiful creation which has arisen under his inspiration, and which is to-day the most perfect specimen of architecture in our city, if not in the entire west. The entire church is a home work, home architect, and home mechanics from first to last, and the result shows what can be done by local talent, if allowed sufficient room the nave by the pipe organ, which, it is

The entrance to the church is by three massive doors in the west facade, admitting to a spacious vestibule, on the north of which is a room fitted up for a cloak and umbrella room, while the beautiful and umbrella room, while the beautiful octagon room on the south is the rector's study, it being beautifully fitted up for that purpose. Every window and every article of furniture is a special gift, and the room is a special feature of the church, being so admirably adapted for the various uses of an active, working parish. In addition to these rooms are two rooms at the east end on each side of the chancel, while the room in the tower upstairs is intended for the storing away of sewing material and garments to be made by the ladies' society of the parish, Over the vestibule is a gallery capable of seating tifty people, which can be used

Entering the nave, or body of the church, the attention is attracted by the lofty roof rising to a height of fifty-six feet from the floor, and supported by a self-supporting truss, as unique in con-struction as beautiful in design and appearance. It seems to be an adaptation of a bridge truss to the gothic ecclesiasti-cal style of the structure, each truss in rounded arches terminating in a Latin cross. The architect can certainly his reputation upon this most beautiful specimen of work, which must be seen and studied to be appreciated. The roof is supported by this truss, without the aid of pillars, thus leaving every seat in the church available and of equal value for seeing and hearing. Where the trusses unite to support the roof at the ntersections of the transepts the effect is still further heightened by the massive imber work looking at the same time so light and graceful, though weighing fully forty thousand pounds. The walls of the nave and ceiling are painted in quiet colors, no contrasts being visible, and all blending in perfect harmony, the stained glass windows being the only bright coloring save in the hancel, where the decorations are in beautiful taste and quite elaborate. The ounted roof of the chancel is in blue ground with silver dashes, which grow closer together as they approach the point of the roof, where the effect is obtained as if some source of light was in the roof hidden from the spectators. The roof is divided from the upper wall line by a silver frieze, beneath which is an extension of the blue ground with gold stencil work, the lower division of the being in plain terra cotta, which serves as a background for the costly and beautiful old oak furniture of the chancel,

The central point of the church is the stately and massive altar and reredos, the gift of Mrs. Marshall Key, in memory of her husband. The panels of the altar are carved in bold relief, the central panel containing "L. H. S.," the side panels grapes and wheat, symbolical of the bread and wine. The reredos extend beyond the altar on either side and to the bottom of the windows, the central panel being illuminated in blue and gold by an artist of the city, Miss Belle Hatcher, and forming a background for the beautiful brass cross which is the gift of Mrs. George Keeline. On each side of the cross are large brass vases, given as a memorial to Mrs. Sybil Stiles, by her sister, Mrs. Mary Robinson. The credence table to the right of the altar is of oak, and is the gift of Mrs. U. H. White. The chancel rail is also a memorial given by Mrs. C. E. Sholes, and is a fine specimen of carving. The beautiful altar books are the gift of Mrs. I. H. Fuller. The clergy stalls are in keeping with the rest of the furniture, and were given by Mrs. Mary E. Benson. The chancel chairs are the ones used in the old church, newly upholstered in peacock blue damask by Mrs. Shepherd. desk was presented by Mr. Van Giesen, and is an enduring and beautiful memorial. Standing on the north side of the chancel is a beautiful lectern in solid brass, the gift of Mrs. John N. Baldwin. South of the chancel is the pulpit, a piece of oak carving which would require more space than can be here spared to describe. The side panels are carved with the emblems of the four evangelists, the center panel representing "The Sermon on the representing "The Sermon on the Mount." This exquisitely beautiful gift is presented to the church by the heirs of the late Robert Percival, and is inscribed on the base: "To the glory of God, and in loving remembrance of Robert Percival."

The oak hymn board on the east wall of the nave is a memorial by Mr. Simon Eiseman to his little daughter, whom be recently lost. The altar, pulpit, lectorn, cross, vases, etc., are from Geissler's, the well known church furnishing house of New York, and the various memorials justify the confidence placed in this firm by those ordering the expensive gifts. They are each and all worthy of a more extended notice. The pews are of new extended notice. The pews are of new design, being also in oak, and are solid and rich in appearance, being at the same time most comfortable seats. These, with the chancel rail and credence table, are from the firm of Grant. Swain & Co., Richmond, Ind., who have sus-tained their well known reputation.

The windows of the church are all memorials, and consequently very beau iful. The Stewart memorial window, in the The Stewart memorial window, in the south gable, is a specimen of work rare in this country, being evidently an endeavor on the part of the artist, Mr. N. H. Eggleston, of New York, to reproduce the effect obtained by the ancient workers in stained glass. The only painting in the window, which is a triple window, is the faces of the three figures in the central panel, all the effect being obis the faces of the three figures in the central panel, all the effect being obtained by the use of glass, the lights and stades being produced by doubling the glass where necessary. Above the figures of the central panel, which terminates in a dark blue field, is a cross, which appears as if made of mother of pearl, surrounded by jewels which have the appearance of real stones, so brilliant and yet soft is their coloring. The side windows are filled with lilies and fleur-de lis, above them being a scroll work of beautiful shades of green and royal purple. The window is inscribed "In loving memory of John T. Stewart, Jr., Joel Littleton Stewart, Eleanor Marie Stewart, this window is creeted by their parents, John T. Stewart and Maria Hunter Stew-west of the Stewart window is the McKune memorial window, given in the memory of Dr. A. B. McKune, by his widow. This, as are all the windows in the nave, is a double one. On one side is a lantern hanging from a vine, on a back-ground representing night, with the inscription on a scroll, "For thou art my lamp, O Lord." On the other panel, representing morning, is a group of an numeration lilies, with a scroll inscribed, And the Lord will lighten my dark

The James window is a memorial given by Mrs. W. C. James to the memory of her only son, who died some years ago. This is a most attractive window, bright in color, and flashing with jewels, yet without a set design. The effect of

ng. The next window in the west is given by Mr. L. C. Brackett, in memory of his wife. In the right center panel is a chalice resting on a Bible, with the words, "Be thou faithful unto death, and on the left is a rustie cross and erown of thorns, encircled by a scroll bearing the words, "I sat under his shadow with great-delight."

The great rose window in the west gable is the gift of the "Acme Club," a society of young ladies in the church, whose untiring energy and faithful work has resulted in the purchase of one of the most attractive windows in the church. The center panel of the window is three boys, robed as choristers, the outside panels being floriated designs in rich subdued colors.

The west window on the north of the nave is a very neat one, inscribed, "Presented by the Rescue Hose Company." Our fire boys are thus represented in this beautiful building, and will doubtless always feel a kindly interest in the good work being carried on by this progressive church society.

The next window on the north is a pleasant contrast to the bright ones on either side, being darker in color. On each window is a cross, with rays extend-ing from the arms, and set with jewels, which glitter in the sunlight and relieve the darker colors of the glass. This window is the gift of an old Council Bluffs resident, who thus shows his interest in his former home. The inscription reads, "This window is erected by S. Bloom, of Deadwood, Dakota, as a token of friendship for the members of St. Paul's parish."

The next window in the nave is that ed by Ivanhoe commandery, 17. Knights Templar On it is embla-zoned the emblems and banners of the "The Beausant," or black and white banner of the Templar, occupying the east window, the red cross banner with Maltese cross the west, both win dows having a heraldic design, the cen ter top panel bearing the lamb and ban-ner, or 'Agnus Dei,' and the inscription 'In Hoc Signo Vinces."

The chancel windows, five in number, are especially beautiful, being figure windows, the north window representing St. Paul, and is presented by Mrs. Rich ard Green, in loving memory of her grandfather, Mr. George Hood, Borough bridge, England. The central window is the Sistine Madonna, a full-length and accurate copy of Raphael's celebrated painting. This window was given by the Sunday school in memory of Lee Webb, son of the former rector of St. Paul's church. This window has on each side of it a copy of Fra Anjelica's angels, one being presented by the young men of the church, the other by the young ladies. The south window in the chancel contains a figure of the Good Shepnerd, and is presented by Mrs. Montgomery to the memory of her grandfather, Sylvanus Dodge, the father of General Dodge, of our city. The chancel windows, as all the windows of the church with the exception of three, are from the manufactory of Mc Cully & Miles, of Chicago, and are beautiful specimens of the art of glass staining. The designer of the cele brated Stewart window is Mr. N. H. Eggleston, of New York, whose exquisite taste is also seen in the interior decora-tions of the church. The carpet of the chancel was presented by the Sunday school, which has thus crowned its worl by finishing the only part of the church which can be called fully completed in every respect. We have endeavored to give our readers some idea of the interior decorations of this elegant church but the most elaborate description must fall far short of the reality. It will well repay all lovers of the beautiful to visit St. Paul's church, where hours can spent in studying its various details. The gas fixtures which are ordered have failed to arrive, thus detracting, in a manner, from the finished effect which their pres ence would produce.

Those who gaze with so much admiration upon this beautiful structure, and who know the history of its building, even from casual observation, must ad mire still more the energy, plack and persistence of the rector, Rev. T J Mackey, who has been a daily inspir-ation to any and all who felt their own energies flagging, and their confidence in its success waning. To him is due th credit for even the incipiency of the great enterprise, and from a feeble start he has worked on, overcoming n.any obstacles until now, when the building in all its beauty appears in reality, as he saw it long ago in his confident looking future-ward, he modestly shrinks from receiving praise for what he has done. The BEE has watched the progress of the building, and known that it has seen this most awake and faithful rector has not only watched but worked. It has been a sur prise to many to see how familiar he has become with every stone and timber, but those who have noted his constancy and anxiety, the thought he has given, the time bestowed, working while others others slept, thinking while others tdreamed, do not wonder that every de sail of the building bears a close relationthin to his own individuality. With all bhis burden upon him he has kept up nravely with his other work, has shown be weakening in the vigor of t hought and holdness of speech which characterizes i is pulvit utterances. The BEE feels that to giving its readers a full description of he new building, it would be amiss if public expression was not given to the feelings of this community concerning the rector, who has been truly a leader and dumb, which opens its year nex for his parish.

We are pained to announce that our greatly respected fellow-citizen, Captain Thomas H. Howard, died at his handsome residence on Coteau street early yesterday morning. He was universally liked. Had it been in any other We deem a word of explanation due our readers in regard to an item pub-lished in last week's Hooter. It stated that our worthy fellow-citizen, Judge Ezra R. Fuller, had been arrested and sort of a race he would have been sent to the stable or set back, but it was evi-dently an innocent blunder, and it only bound over for getting drunk and riding up and down the street on a mule he had stolen from a neighbor and shooting right and left, and wounding several persons. There was a slight error in the item, as it should have read that "Baldy" Ford was the man that was arrested and our esteemed friend, Judge Fuller, the justice before whom he was arraigned. In the hurry of getting the forms to press for a large paper like the Hooter small typographical errors like this will sometimes occur, and no one regrets them more deeply than ourselves.

The gallant Colonel Brayson of this city took a slight offense at a little unintentional item that we inserted in the last issue of the Hooter, and fired two shots through our window. Fortunately for us neither took effect. The colonel comes of some of the best families of Virginia and is naturally spirited and quick to resent an insult. If the genial colonet desires it we would be pleased to print an apology, though we can assure him no insult was intended. As we both will continue to reside in Harney we hope to live on good terms with him.

It has come to our ears that Bill Arnold, a cowardly, cringing sneak who has hung around this city for some time, claimed to be dissatisfied with a statement made in our paper for last week concerning him, and went around the streets Monday telling people that he didn't like it. We take this manner of notifying the sneaking, disreputable pup that he does not want to repeat the performance. If he don't like anything we have said about him he can keep his mouth shut. We should have called him to account for his utterances before this, but he jumped the town the next day and has gone to his former home in Ohio to reside in the The dastardly our had better remain there, for if he ever comes back here we shall make it warm for him.

From the Council Hluffs Daily Herald:
Mrs. E. M. Gerard, wife of Engineer Gerard, of the Union Pacific, this city, has been a great sufferer for many years, with what was supposed to be career of the throat. It was so bad that she was threatened with sta varion. Her general heaith was completely broken down, she could only swallow liquid food, and even that her stomach could not digest or assimilate. Physicians of Council Bluffs and Omaha gave no relief. Dr. Jefferts, of this city, was called. In four weeks' time he cured her threat, and com-pletely restored her general health. Had Mrs. Gerard not obtained re lef soon she would have died from blord poison, the same condition that destroyed the life of Gen. Grant.

From the Council Bluffs Daily Globe:

M. A. McPike, editor of the Cambria (Ebensburg, Pa.) Freeman, has been the personal friend of the editor of the Globe for more than twenty years, and is known wherever he is known uses one of the best men living. He is also an intimate friend of Mr. Clark of the Nonparell. He has been unfortunate in the fact that his family was ravaged with diphtheria, and greatly distressed. Mr. Clark having heard of his calamity sent him some of Dr. Jefferis' Diphtheria, Cure, it was used at once, and the lives of the rest of his children saved. Letters from Mr. McPike are unbounded in their expressions of gratitude for finding some means of averting she loss of his whole group of little and tender ones. Five of Mr. McPike's children out of eight died from diphtheria before he had an opportunity of using Dr. Jefferis' remedy.
